NARRATIVE STATEMENT

PROPOSED FIRST PRESIDENTIAL CITATION

NARRATIVE

As part of the strategic effort of the 15th Air Force against industrial and counter air targets in Southwestern Germany, a force of 167 B-17 type airplanes of the 5th Wing was dispatched on 18 July 1944 to attack and destroy the Memmingen Airdrome and installations at Memmingen, Germany. The importance of this target is emphasized by its description in the Intelligence Annex to the Operations Order "Memmingen Airdrome activity has increased, with recent cover showing 70 to 75 ME-110's and 410's not too well dispersed. The installations are used for repair and assembly. This makes this airdrome one of the highest priority counter-air targets."

The 483rd Bombardment Group (H) was in the fifth position in the Wing formation of six Groups and was led by Captain Louis T. Seith, Commanding Officer of the 840th Squadron. Over the Adriatic Sea, flying through eight-tenths cumulus clouds, the groups in the combat wing formation became separated. Unable to penetrate the adverse weather en route, two Groups totalling forty four (44) B-17's returned to base while twenty seven (27) B-17's from another Group attacked an alternate target. The upset time schedules caused by the extremely bad weather made it impossible for fighter escort to accomplish rendezvous or to enable them to accompany the groups of bombers as planned. Formations were further confused by messages sent out from enemy radio stations which transmitted instructions that since the primary target could not be attacked, it would be advisable to strike any alternate target at will. In the absence of a properly authenticated recall signal from Air Force, the 483rd Bombardment Group decided to attack the primary target as ordered and continued on alone and unescorted over the Northern edge of Italy, over Austria and into the target area in Southwestern Germany.

At the assigned Initial Point, approximately seventy five (75) single engine fighters, half of them ME 109's and half FW 190's were observed to the right of the formation maneuvering into position for a tail attack. As this enemy fighter force made a wide turn to attack from the rear of the formation, a much larger group of fighters fell in behind the initial force. In the face of these unexpected and overwhelming odds, the 483rd Bombardment Group, with extraordinary heroism, gallantry and determination made the decision to carry out the bombing as ordered. The entire fighter attack, which was executed by approximately two hundred (200) enemy fighters was a well-planned maneuver designed and aggressively carried out to destroy a single group in the shortest possible time. The fighters attacked in waves of five or six in close javelin formation on a level with the tails of the rearmost B-17's and the concentrated fire power, both of cannon and rockets was overwhelming. The last box, composed of seven airplanes of the 816th Squadron, was entirely destroyed in the first attack, but not before putting up a brave and gallant fight. Three airplanes were shot to pieces while maintaining position in the formation, a fourth went down apparently out of control and broke apart as soon as the airplane went into a spin.

The three remaining B-17's dropped out of the formation apparently out of control with two of them on fire, but with their guns still firing. The enemy fighters moved up making the same concentrated attack on the seven airplanes comprising the 817th Bombardment Squadron flying number three box position. They employed identical methods of attack. Five airplanes were destroyed in a comparatively short time, several dropping out of formation on fire and with the metal skin peeling off, but here again the gunners continued firing to the end. During the entire attack there was no fighter escort and it became apparent that without any additional fighter support, the group would be entirely annihilated. Yet in this certain knowledge of possible destruction, undaunted by the spectacle of Fortresses exploding and burning on every side, forced to witness comrades jumping from their airplanes, some of them with their parachutes on fire, the crews gallantly and with great intrepidity pressed home their determined attack on the briefed target. The enemy fighters then moved up to the number two box and two more B-17's went down, one of which broke apart from the impact of the concentrated fire power. The other was in flames but eye-witnesses noticed the tail guns still firing which showed that the gallant gunner was doing his duty to the end. It was entirely apparent that the crews were more intent upon manning their guns, fighting off the enemy, endeavoring to reach the assigned target and drop their bombs than with any thought of personal safety.

The methods employed by the enemy fighters enabled the formation gunners to bring only a minimum number of guns to bear upon them at any one time. The Germans came in very close, throttled back, maintaining almost the same flying speed as the formation, made a very precise attack, then rolling over, dove down and away from the formation. At this time, the group reached the assigned target and the twelve (12) remaining airplanes dropped their bombs, destroying the objective. As they turned off the target, twelve (12) P-38's from the 1st Fighter Group appeared and attacked the German fighters. With this additional support from our own fighters, coupled with the possibility of exhaustion of the German airplanes' ammunition, the enemy fire power was reduced to a degree whereby the gunners of the Fortress formation could withstand further attack.

During the course of this fierce air battle, gunners of the 483rd Bombardment Group's formation, accounted for fifty three (53) enemy aircraft destroyed, eight (8) probably destroyed and five (5) damaged.

Bombing results were devastating and according to the Intelligence Operations Summary, Headquarters Mediterranean Allied Strategic Air Force, 19 July 1944, "bomb strike photos showed 118 enemy aircraft present (40 single engine, 77 twin engine and one multi-engine). Claims were: 17 destroyed, 4 probably destroyed, and 14 damaged. A heavy concentration of strikes covered the entire installations area on the North side of the Airdrome. Two and possibly three of the very large hangars were very heavily hit and totally destroyed. Four other hangars on the North perimeter suffered direct hits and damage by blast. A very large hangar on the West boundary received direct hits and near misses. Two warehouses and adjacent rolling stock in the South central part suffered direct hits followed by fires and two explosions. Several small shops in the Southeast corner received direct hits and were destroyed. Scattered damage to shops, barracks and administration buildings in the West end of the area is also visible."

Although 143 Officers and men paid with their lives and fourteen (14) out of twenty six (26) airplanes failed to return from the attack on this vitally important target, yet the damage to the enemy morally and physically in losing 101 fighter aircraft destroyed or damaged, a sizeable portion of their already hard-pressed Air Force, is irreparable and should prove an advantage to our Air Force in future bombing missions. Rarely if ever in this war has an air attack been carried out against such overwhelming odds, estimated at 17 to 1, or with more determination, extraordinary heroism or gallantry. Individual gunners shot down three and four enemy planes; pilots kept on their bomb run in a desperate effort to unload their bombs on the assigned target regardless of the fact that they were being shot to pieces and were in many cases doomed. The leading box, after "bombs away", even slowed down to give their comrades whatever fire cover and chance of closing up they could, although it almost spelled their own destruction. Through this entire action, morale, crew esprit and individual heroism could not reach a higher point. By its devotion to duty, and extraordinary display of heroism in the face of unparalleled odds and the extremely gallant manner in which this attack was carried out, the members of the 483rd Bombardment Group have reflected great credit upon themselves and upon the Army Air Force.

PROPOSED CITATION

PROPOSED CITATION

483RD BOMBARDMENT GROUP (H). For outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 18 July 1944. In connection with the counter air offensive against vitally important and high priority targets in Germany, the 483rd Bombardment Group (H) was ordered to attack and destroy the enemy airdrome and installations at Memmingen. Enroute to the target, the Group became separated from the other Groups in the formation and from the fighter escort by extremely severe and adverse weather conditions. Alone, the Group proceeded to the target area where it was aggressively and vigorously attacked with cannon and rocket fire from an overwhelming force of approximately two hundred (200) enemy fighters. In the air battle which ensued, gunners of the Group shot down or damaged sixty six (66) enemy aircraft at the same time losing fourteen (14) airplanes with their entire crews. Undismayed by the ferocity and viciousness of the attack, and in spite of the severe losses suffered, the remainder of the Group proceeded, and with the greatest heroism, gallantry, and determination, carried out the bombing attack as ordered, though under the concentrated gunfire of the entire enemy fighter force. The bombs were dropped on the target with devastating effect, destroying all major installations and destroying or damaging an additional thirty five (35) grounded enemy aircraft. Throughout the entire action which was carried out with exceptional gallantry and determination, and in spite of overwhelming opposition, crew esprit and individual heroism could not be excelled. By their professional skill and devotion to duty, their extraordinary display of heroism in the face of unparralleled odds and the exceptionally gallant manner in which this attack was carried out, combat and ground personnel 483rd Bombardment Group (H) have reflected great credit upon themselves and the Armed Forces of the United States of America.

II. TARGET IMPORTANCE: (T.C. No. 13-18-NA)

MEMMINGEN A/D activity has increased, with recent cover showing 70 to 75 ME 110's and 410's not too well dispersed. The installations are used for major repair and probably assembly. This makes the airdrome one of the highest priority counter-air targets.

Elevation: 1,978 feet.

Hangar, storage and barrack facilities are along the northern edge of the A/D. A railway runs east-west through the area. There is a compass swinging base on the NW edge of the area. A/C are usually dispersed in front of the hangars and along southern edge of landing area, which is roughly rectangular in shape. An east-west highway passes just north of the field. (See accompanying photographs)

III. ENEMY DEFENSES:

FLAK:

At Target: On 27 June there was no flak reported. It is likely some has been moved in since that time due to increased importance of target. Smoke screen probably will be encountered.

Route In: Avoid VENICE & MESTRE at landfall 27H.

First contact expected about 47° 30'N or shortly after. Possibility of interception by 30 to 40 fighters from North Italian bases exists on route in and out. Probable the effort will be on reduced scale due to tactical operations.

485RD BOMBARDMENT GROUP (H)
APO 520, U. S. Army

SPECIAL NARRATIVE REPORT.

MISSION: 18 July 1944, Memmingen A/D, Germany.

I. ENEMY RESISTANCE.

A. Air. Our Group was alone when it arrived at the I.P. at 1045 hours and was immediately attacked by approximately 100 FW-190's, a few of which may have been Me-110's and Me-109's. They made their first pass from out of the sun at three o'clock and peeled off at 150 yards. They immediately reformed and came in en masse from six o'clock, attacking our rear box. They flew in a stepped-up javelin formation making it very difficult for anyone other than our tail gunners to fire at them. Their plan of attack was fitted perfectly for our box in trail formation and they concentrated on one box at a time working from rear to front.

As they came in at close range, they seemed to throttle down and poured continuous rocket and 20 mm fire into our formation. One rocket projector was observed under each wing and it was stated that when directly hit by a rocket a bomber would burst into flames immediately. A multitude of small white bursts were observed.

The attack lasted twenty minutes and practically all passes were made from level rear and from five, six and seven o'clock. The fighter escort arrived about eight minutes after the initial attack, and was very effective from then on, despite the fact that they were heavily outnumbered.

The enemy fighters were of various colors, including the following: silver fuselage with yellow cowling; silver fuselage with red band near tail; black with gray bellies and some olive drab.

From the above encounters, our Group lost fifteen (15) aircraft, and claims the following victories: 28 destroyed, 7 probables, and 2 damaged.

After leaving the target area, our Group was again attacked by 25 Me-109's over Innsbruck. They came in from high, out of the sun, and passed under our formation. No losses or victories resulted from this attack.

B. Flak. There was no flak at the target.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

II. SIGNIFICANT OBSERVATIONS.

A. Communications. The command channel was jammed by the enemy, making it impossible to call the escort for assistance.

It was the opinion of our Group leader that entirely too much intercommunication was conducted by other Groups on the way into Germany, making it possible for the enemy to definitely establish the position and course of the formation.

B. Flak Positions. Flak was observed only at Innsbruck, which appeared to be from approximately six (6) guns.

C. Naval. Two ships which resembled submarines were observed at 45/20N, 13/00E.

D. Ground. A very large airfield with several runways was observed at 46/03N, 12/57E. Another airfield was observed at 48/04N, 10/55E.

E. Air. Our aircraft No. 792 was seen at 1035 hours, heading for Switzerland, with one engine on fire.

A total of eight (8) chutes was all that were seen during the encounter.

III. CONCLUSION.

A. Total losses. From fighters - 15.

B. Damage. From fighters - 6 slight, 2 serious.

C. Victories. (Claim sheets being submitted)

Destroyed: 28 FW-190's.
Probables: 7 FW-190's.
Damaged: 2 FW-190's.

D. Corrections. None.

AERODROME : MELTINGEN (1410 Hrs.)

Damage (attack 18 July)

Bombing is very well concentrated on the aerodrome buildings.

The two very large hangars, each 325' long, which lie 400 yards from the North perimeter to which they are connected by a taxi track, have been completely destroyed.

Of the four large hangars fronting the North perimeter, the most Easterly one is very badly damaged. The building is unfortunately partly cloud obscured and no stereo cover is available. The extent of the damage cannot, therefore, be assessed, but it can be seen that the hangar is now roofless.

No serious structural damage to the other three hangars is visible. A direct hit at the rear of the central one has caused damage and the roof of the building shows the effects of blast. Near misses have blasted the other two hangars.

The very large hangar (325') on the West boundary has received a direct hit almost in the centre. A hole measuring 30' by 30' is visible.

The very large V-type repair hangar in the N.W. corner has not suffered any structural damage. Some close misses are seen.

Many hits were scored on the barrack buildings. One wing of the irregular shaped block, which borders the football pitch to the East, has been very badly damaged and a connecting passage way has been demolished.

Hits scored on the central block of buildings in this area have inflicted very serious damage. The most Easterly block has also been hit several times, and is now more than one third destroyed. A small H-shaped block North of the above group is more than one quarter destroyed.

In addition to the above damaging hits, all buildings have been blasted by many close misses. Hits and near misses have been scored among living quarters in the N.W. corner of the built-up area. Several small buildings have been demolished and others badly damaged.

Hits have also been scored on premises, which lie North of the barrack area. Several buildings show severe damage.

CONFIDENTIAL

P.I.R. NO. G248

GERMANY (15SG/575 18 July 1/14000 'A').

AERODROME : MERMINGEN (Cont'd)

Hits in the vicinity of the aerodrome railroad sidings which lie behind the north hangars have destroyed at least 20 railroad cars and inflicted considerable damage on small buildings in the area.

The following a/c have been destroyed or damaged:-

2 a/c (burned out) : 6 Me.110/410 (destroyed) :
5 Me.110/410 (destroyed or badly damaged) : 1
Me.110 (damaged) : 3 s/e fighters (destroyed or badly damaged) : 4 s/e fighters (damaged).

It is probable that additional a/c have been destroyed or damaged as cloud obscures a part of the aerodrome and craters are visible through thin parts of the cloud. Probable a/c are also seen in this area.

PERIOD: 2400 Hours 17 July to 2400 hours 18 July 1944.

* * * * *

RESULTS: Bomb strike photos show 118 E/A present (40 S/E, 77 T/E and 1 Multi-Engine). Claims are: 17-4-14. A heavy concentration of strikes covers entire installations. Area on the North side of the A/D. Two and possible three of the very large hangars were very heavily hit and totally destroyed. Four other hangars on the North perimeter suffered direct hits and damage by blast. A very large hangar on the West boundary received direct hits and near misses. Two warehouses and adjacent rolling stock in the South central part suffered direct hits followed by fires and 2 explosions. Several small shops in the S.E corner received direct hits and near misses. Several units of barracks in East part of the area suffered direct hits and were destroyed. Scattered damage to shops, barracks and administration buildings in the West end of the area is also visible.

OPPOSITION: IAH flak was reported by one bomb group at the target. SH at INNSBRUCK and ME at Brenner Pass. Bomber formations were split up during penetration of adverse route weather and were subject to concurrent attacks by a large number of enemy aircraft. 30 Me 109 and FW 190 were encountered between TREVISO and UDINE during penetration. They were not aggressive, attacking the last wave of bombers, and were soon dispersed by the escort. 5/6 of a group of 20 Me 109, 110 and Ju 88 attacked the 301 Bomb Group aggressively West of Innsbruck. 125 Me 109, FW 190, and a few Me 110 made a 20 minute aggressive attack on 435 Bomb Group from the I.P. to the target, while another 100 Me 109 and FW 190 engaged the escort. The E/A were very experienced and aggressive, diving through the formation, using cannon and rockets against the bombers, and attacking in sufficient numbers to prevent concentrated defensive efforts by escort. Most attacks were from the rear, the FW 190's climbing over the bombers and the Me 109's passing underneath after the attacks. After the target an additional 25 Me 109's were encountered in the INNSBRUCK area.

5. Enemy Fighter Opposition on 18 and 19 July

Missions: The attacks on FRIEDRICHSHAFEN and MUELLINGEN on 18 July were opposed by from 200 to 225 single engine fighters. The first encounters occurred North of the Adriatic when 15 to 30 Me 109's, presumably Italian based, engaged an escort group enroute to the target. In the target area, where the next engagements occurred, the enemy concentrated almost exclusively on one group of bombers attacking MUELLINGEN. This group was first attacked South of MUELLINGEN by approximately 75 enemy fighters. Shortly after the first attack about 100 enemy fighters, with auxiliary tanks, arrived from the area North of MUNICH. On the return 25 enemy fighters were encountered by the bombers near INNSBRUCK.
